

Build Your Own Cabrini-Green

1:1000 scale

The 134-unit building at 1230 N. Burling was one of eight towers of the William Green Homes built in 1962 by architects Pace Associates which were adjacent to the Francis Cabrini Homes row houses and mid-rises built from 1942-1957 for the Chicago Housing Authority.

In later decades the Cabrini-Green housing project became notorious as a haven of crime and entrenched poverty, but the towers were home and community for many families. In 2000 the CHA announced a "Plan for Transformation" to demolish all of its high-rise buildings.

This model was made in collaboration with Project Cabrini Green to commemorate the demolition of Chicago's last public housing high-rise in March 2011.

www.buildyourownchicago.com

www.projectcabrinigreen.org